USER INTRODUCTION

First, we'd like to thank you for your participating in our usability tests. We highly value your participation, and all your feedback or comments during the experiment are of significant importance to our evaluation of our preliminary paper prototype and will be much appreciated.

Next, we will briefly introduce you our two types of paper prototypes. Our designs are applications that aimed at facilitating the interactions between instructors and students, and between students and students. For the purpose of testing, you will be first provided these prototypes, after which you're supposed to discover any actionable properties and figure out the workflow of the systems. While you are exploring the system, our tester will simulate the interaction process between the you and the prototype by switching the interface design cards as per your actions.

The followings are some tips to help you participate in our testing:

1. Just relax

The first thing we want to assure you is that it's the prototype we are evaluating, NOT you. So just be natural without any concerns about any consequences.

2. Talk to us

Whenever you have confusions or misunderstandings, or anything in mind you think is good or bad with respect to the prototypes, feel free talk to us. Any of your comments, feedbacks or opinions are of significant importance to us. We do care about how you feel.

Please enjoy, and thanks again for your participation!